Objectives of the Study:

A. General

This study aims to create psychological narratives derived from evidences collected in the crime scene in order to know the reason behind the crime committed by the offender.

B. Specific

In this study, the researchers asked three problems. First was the demographic profile of the murderers, and the second one is the psychological narratives taken based on the evidences from the crime scene and the identification of the crime scene theme.

For the first problem, two of the offenders were male and one was a female. All of them had relationship with their victims, the two of which were husband and wife and the other was friends. Two of them are unemployed and one has a source of living.

All of the cases had similarities in the events that have happened, hence were labeled on one category. They have all acted out on emotions and it was evident on the wounds sustained by the victims. A shift of theme was present in one case, which happened due to the actions the offender did in the crime scene.
