Objectives of the Study

A. General

This study will determine the investment opportunity in the textile business, whether this country is best suited for textile.

B. Specific

This study is to provide the researchers with insights on the methods of creating a textile establishment. It may serve as an introductory reference on the size, method, and programs needed to best suit the local and international textile market. It can also serve as a reference for further studies.

Scope and Delimitation

This study is limited to Dasmariñas, Cavite where it will be located.

Methodology

The research method used in this feasibility study is the descriptive method. The primary data were obtained through personal interviews conducted with people who are involved in this kind of business. The data gathered were interpreted, arranged, and classified according to its importance and relevance.

The secondary data were also gathered from different sources such as the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), Industry Digest (1996), Industrial Digest (1996) and The World Book Encyclopedia.

Conclusion

The need for textile in the present time is rapidly increasing but the industry is not growing to the availability of raw materials and its high costs.

More textile manufacturing business is needed to meet the demands of the people and the market.

Recommendations

1. Production of raw materials needed in the manufacture of textile to cut costs (importation) and fasten production.
2. More support and assistance to the present industry.
3. More programs and encouragement about the business as those future businessmen will be attracted to go into the same business.
