

The Influence of Facebook to the Undergraduate Third Year Criminology Students of De La Salle University –Dasmariñas

An Undergraduate Thesis

Presented to the Faculty of the College of Criminal Justice Education

De La Salle University – Dasmariñas

City of Dasmariñas, Cavite

In Partial Fulfilment

of the Requirement for the Degree of

Bachelor of Science in Criminology

By:

John Lester P. Lagdamen

Francis P. Podiotan

Steven Michael G. Romero

MAY 2017

ABSTRACT

Name of the Institution: De La Salle University – Dasmariñas

Address: Dasmariñas City, Cavite

Title: The Influence of Facebook to the Undergraduate Third Year Criminology Students of De La Salle University – Dasmariñas

Authors: John Lester P. Lagdamen
Steven Michael G. Romero
Francis P. Podiotan

Degree: Bachelor of Science in Criminology

Date Started: September 2016

Date Completed: May 2017

The study determined the influence of Facebook to the undergraduate third year criminology students of DLSU-D in their study habits, communication, health condition, and lifestyle.

The research used a self-made survey questionnaire in order to acquire all the data and information needed for this study. Questions were prepared to respond for answers to the problems enumerated. A self-made survey questionnaire was administered to the DLSU-D third year criminology students. Descriptive and quantitative methods were applied.

The study revealed that the respondents moderately agreed that Facebook is a distraction to their study habits and it doesn't help them motivate to do well in their studies.

The respondents are also aware that they experience anxiety or other forms of health condition as they spend time using Facebook.

On the positive side, the respondents moderately agreed that they use Facebook to communicate and keep up to date with their family, friends, and old colleagues from the past.

Facebook has its positive and bad effects on the respondents or the users. The respondents should be educated about the proper usage of Facebook or other social media in order to utilize them properly to their capacity.