

Abstract

The way of learning using information systems seems to make advancement in the field of education. Students tend to choose easy, fast and convenient way of learning and it can be achieved through technology. In this generation most of the people has an access to the internet. Many transactions and activities are being made through internet and business operates through the use of World Wide Web as well. Is it clearly seen that internet make the world go round not just money.

The proponents of this study developed a Computer Aided Instruction on Differential Calculus for De La Salle University - Dasmariñas particularly to Computer Science students. This is an online system developed using ASP.Net. The proponents used flash creator in making the interactive lessons and SQL Server R2 for the database.tra

This study serves as an online system that helps student on learning their lessons. This has interactive lessons that make it easy for students to understand. The system is also user friendly, easy to handle and manipulate. The system made it sure that the student will learn every lesson before continuing to the next topic. There are also quizzes and examination to the test the student's assessments. The